CASE STUDY: LUKE GRIFFITHS

Broach the subject of customisation in the boating world and thoughts turn to high end superyachts with seven or eight figure price tags. But whilst the scope for really bespoke creations exists mostly in this financial stratosphere, there's a surprising amount that can be done to personalise high end production boats such as the smaller Princess models, as Luke Griffiths can attest.

Luke purchased a new Princess V40, the smallest of the current Princess range, through Princess Motor Yacht Sales, and then took advantage of the company's extensive retrofit department to fine-tune the boat specifically to his needs. "I purchased the boat through Richard Clarke at Princess Motor Yacht Sales Plymouth office" says Luke, and he was great in helping tailor the boat to my requirements. I didn't ever feel that I was being sold to, he was simply helpful, pleasant to work with and allowed me to make informed decisions assisted by his experience".

Having owned a smaller boat before, Luke had a pretty good idea of the use that he and his family were likely to be putting the boat to. Basing it in Plymouth, the plan was coastal and offshore cruising along the south coast and across the channel. Ground tackle was one of the first areas to be addressed. "We like to spend a lot of time at anchor, so I had the anchor chain extended to 50 metres and I upgraded to a heavier and higher spec Ultra Anchor, an expensive but extremely efficient unit with a weighted tip to help it set securely". Extra mooring warps and larger fenders were also sourced. To improve life on board, Luke had PMYS fit an ice maker into the wet bar unit beneath the barbecue. "It was an expensive option" says Luke, "but it has proven very worthwhile". Teak chocks were made for the hydraulic bathing platform to precisely fit Luke's AB Lammina 3 metre RIB.

Luke and his family have clocked up over sixty running hours through their first season, cruising between Brixham in one direction and Falmouth to the other

Adding to the convenience quotient is an upgraded battery system linked to a 2.5kW inverter to give 240v supply without recourse to the generator. Extra sockets were installed which feature USB feeds for easy charging of electronics. PMYS also upgraded the audio visual systems, fitting TV's into each cabin linked to Apple TV whilst a wifi hot spot enables everyone on board to log in. More subtle interior tweaks included a custom mirror fitted to a dinette bulkhead ("it makes the saloon feel so much bigger" enthuses Luke), high quality bedding and even water filters on the fresh water system. Underway an upgraded multi function chart plotter linked to HD radar and a transmit/receive AIS system, aiding navigation and helping keep Luke and his family safe. There's even an anemometer reporting real time wind direction and strength to assist in close quarter manoeuvres.

As a finishing touch Luke had Princess Motor Yacht Sales vinyl wrap the hull sides. "It's a satin grey finish with a thin yellow stripe just above the waterline. It looks fantastic, subtle, rather than flash".

Despite a mid summer start, Luke and his family have clocked up over sixty running hours through their first season, cruising between Brixham in one direction and Falmouth to the other, thoroughly enjoying the extensive modifications by Princess Motor Yacht Sales that have turned what was already a very special boat into something unique to them.
